WEBINAR: LOL! : Limiting Our Liability for Indemnity,
Attorneys Fees and Other External Risks
Wednesday June 22, 2011; 12:00-1:30pm Eastern

PRESENTER: David A. Ericksen, a principal shareholder in and President of the law firm of Severson & Werson, leads the firm's Construction and Environmental Practices. His nearly 20 years of professional expertise including lead litigation and trial counsel has made him an active resource for risk management, strategic planning, and transactional matters. He specializes in the representation of architects, engineers, construction managers, design-builders, and other construction professionals and is viewed as a trusted and valued resource for Design Professionals and their insurance carriers.

DESCRIPTION: Design professional service agreements too often seek to transfer uncontrolled external risks to the design professional through clauses such as indemnity and defense obligations and/or prevailing party attorney's fees clauses. The combination of aggressive clients, the current economy and proactive courts have recently made this risk even more acute especially when demands and actions during the course of the project delivery also often dramatically expand these exposures. This webinar will identify and break down the hot spots for excessive expansion of responsibility for external parties and events and provide specific recommendations, strategies and tools to manage the project delivery exposures.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

1. Identify and discuss contractual and performance points that can establish the basis for excessive responsibility for external factors.
2. Develop contractual strategies to manage problematic contract clauses in themselves or through alternate drafting and strategies.
3. Learn strategies and tools to identify mid-project risk points and the process and actions to avoid expansion of responsibility while still serving the appropriate needs of the client and project.
